

Trans-national Train-the-Trainer Workshop Servant, partner, boss? Leadership in Hospice and Palliative Care

In hospices and palliative care units, multi-disciplinary teams are made up of experts, trained staff and laymen. The organizational culture is often dominated by values such as compassion on the one hand and a pioneering spirit, often resulting from historical roots. In many cases, leadership in such teams seems to be a privilege of leading experts. But as organizations grow, mature and diversify, a different concept of leadership may be more useful and even necessary. Specific competencies need to be developed for staff with managerial or supervisory responsibilities.

What are the main features of professional leadership? How can new concepts of effective leadership be applied in hospice and palliative care? What are the key issues for leaders in this field?

Target group: Leaders and decision makers in the field of Hospice and Palliative Care. The workshop is aimed particularly at participants from CEE and SEE.

Trainers: Karin Michaela Krischanitz, leadership trainer, consultant for profit and non-profit organisations, coach, mediator (Vienna)
Magda Veselska, senior advisor Slovak Catholic Charity, former financial director at a hospice, trainer for management in non-profit organisations (Slovak Republic)
